Commodity Line Comments: QuickSeries Disaster-Ready Print Content for Continuity of Operations
QuickSeries supports state and local government agencies with pre-developed, immediately deployable print content designed specifically for disruption, disaster, and continuity-of-operations scenarios. Unlike commodity print vendors that require agency-developed source files during an incident, QuickSeries maintains a library of pre-written, field-tested emergency preparedness and response materials that can be printed, inserted, and distributed with minimal lead time during a declared or operational disruption. This approach reduces:

- Time-to-distribution during emergencies
- Staff burden on WVOT and partner agencies
- Risk associated with drafting, approving, and formatting content under incident conditions
- Relevance to Print Operations Disaster Recovery

QuickSeries materials are structured to support emergency communications, operational continuity, and responder/public guidance during events that impact normal print operations, including:

- Natural disasters
- Infrastructure or technology disruptions
- Public health emergencies
- Multi-agency incident responses

All content is written in plain language, aligned to national preparedness and response frameworks, and formatted for rapid print production (pocket guides, inserts, handouts, and mailers). Where required, QuickSeries can:

- Apply State of West Virginia branding
- Incorporate agency-specific procedures or contact information
