TECHNICAL QUESTIONS

CRFQ DOT 2600000018 RALEIGH CO. HEADQUARTERS ROOF REPLACEMENT

1. The Specifications shows for ½ inch OSB to go on top of the insulation. We cannot do that because it will void the Warranty. With the taper system being installed, that will consist of two layers. You do not need a cover board for a 20 year warranty. So my question is, do you still want to install a cover board?

Answer: Yes, we do wish to have cover board. It is to be a minimum High- Density (HD) cover board, consisting of 2 layers with staggered joints.

2. In the Specifications, it shows for the insulation R value to be a minimum of R2.5 and an average R value of R25. It must either be an average R value or a minimum R value so that we don't have to build up the edge with a lot of extra woodwork that will not be known until we do the work. An average R value is usually used on garages, workshops, etc. My question is, do you want to use the average or minimum R value insulation?

Answer: The specs call for a low-rise foam, a minimum of 2.5 inches.

The specs call for an average R-Value of tapered insulation shall be R-25 at a minimum.
